

What does a prison mean for a community?

Jobs with Benefits

- A new prison means hundreds of new jobs.
- These are careers with good pay and full benefits, like health, dental, vision, disability and life insurance, 401(k) retirement, and more.

Boost for Businesses

- Prisons need goods and services to operate. That's great news for local businesses.
- More people working means more money being spent locally as well.

Much Needed Revenues

- Property and sales taxes from partnership prisons give local officials much needed revenues for services in the community—like schools, keeping property taxes low, helping build roads and parks.
- Most of the people working at the prison are local residents. That means more revenues for services, but without increases in costs.

A Safe Community

- In addition to dedicated local law enforcement officials, a prison adds hundreds of highly trained criminal justice professionals in a community.
- Specialized training between the prison and local first responders results in faster, better emergency services for a community.

America's Leader in Partnership Corrections

Who is CCA?

- A Respected Leader

CCA has operated prisons as a partner to federal, state and local government for 25 years. These are some of the safest prisons in the country.

- A Provider of Quality

CCA facilities follow the strictest accreditation standards of the American Correctional Association, the oldest, largest and most respected correctional organization in the world.

Forbes magazine has named CCA as one of "America's Best Big Companies."

CCA proudly offers education classes, vocational training, substance abuse treatment and faith-based courses to inmates, knowing that positive behaviors learned in prison mean these individuals are less likely to re-commit crimes.

- A Believer in Accountability

CCA's partnership prisons operate at the highest standards. We combine the strict oversight from government with the efficiency of business—and that means safe, humanely-operated prisons that provide cost savings to taxpayers.

Corporate Responsibility Officer magazine ranked CCA as one of the nation's "Top 100 Corporate Citizens" for efforts in employee relations, finance, governance and philanthropy.

- A Solid Career Choice

CCA's 17,500 employees nationwide consider CCA a professional career—not just a job.

Employees earn competitive salaries and comprehensive benefits, including 401(k) retirement, health coverage, disability insurance and paid time off.

Our prisons employ security officers, teachers, business staff, nurses, doctors, other medical professionals, maintenance personnel, substance abuse counselors and more. Annual paid training and development opportunities prepare them for advancement.
